Project Summary:

This project addresses the financial and human risk factors associated with dairy farm business transfers. We will work with 50 Vermont dairy producers, one-on-one and in small groups, on issues related to farm transfer planning. Producers with dairy management teams and the two young dairy producer discussion group members will be key focus areas. This project will also follow up with producers who have attended introductory transferring the farm workshops and do a direct mail to the ~ 1100 VT dairy producers in VT. This project will provide VT dairy producers with guidance material for developing a farm transfer plan and implementing positive change as well as a catalyst for action - cost share for professional fees. For producers to have successful farm transfers they need a plan and help along the way. We will work with producers who are interested in moving forward with a farm transfer.

Risk Management Improvements:

Our project's targeted results fall within the financial, legal and human/personal Risk Management Areas. By establishing and or improving transfer goals and farm communications our project participants will improve their human/personal risk management. Improved communications and setting goals are keys to managing this risk area. Participants will have a better understanding of tax issues, business entities and transfer strategies for their individual farm and develop a written transfer plan outline – this will address the farms financial and legal risk management areas.

Although this project doesn't directly reduce risk such as purchasing crop insurance would, it is an indicator that participants are taking proactive steps to manage these risk areas.

A risk facing the Vermont dairy industry is the aging dairy farmer population and the number of producers who have not developed a transfer plan for their business. There are approximately 1100 dairy producers in Vermont. The dairy industry in Vermont generates 80-85% of our agricultural revenue. Successful farm transfer planning is an essential part of Vermont's dairy industry and it's important to the industries future in Vermont.

The key to the success of this project is working one-on-one with dairy producers who are ready to move forward with transfer planning and giving them specific guidance and follow-up in the implementation of changed practices. Our project will provide one-on-one guidance and follow-up to keep the process moving forward.

Proposed Results - What Participants Will Learn, Achieve, Apply

Producer Démand:

There are approximately 1100 dairy producers in Vermont. Based on a study done by Bob Parsons, University of Vermont Extension, Vermont dairy operators' average 49 years of age and are most likely to have farmed for more than 20 years. We would expect the age to be higher if the survey asked the age of the owner of the farmland rather than the age of the operator. Results of the survey showed more than half of Vermont's dairy farmers have been making key management decisions for more than 20 years and over 70% are sole proprietorships with one or two family members working on the farm full-time.

At the 2009 Vermont Farm Show we surveyed producers and found that 86.8 % - mostly dairy producerswould like individual and or small group support with their individual farm transfer plan.

In a survey done by the University of Arkansas, dairy producers in the East are most interested in learning from each other and from professionals and in receiving new information from farm visits, printed fact sheets and small group meetings.

By tailoring our approach around these interests we will have success in drawing in participants.

The State of Vermont established Dairy Management Teams in 2007. There are now multiple teams up and running and transfer planning is one of the goals for many of these teams. We will draw from these teams for project participants as well as two very active young dairy producer discussion groups. These are the producer 'groups' that will choose to participate in and will benefit most from this project.

Project participants will also include producers who have attended an introductory farm transfer planning workshop and are ready to move forward with managing farm transfer risks.

By including a direct mail to all VT dairy producers which will include a transfer planning resource list and information on the cost share for professional services, we will also be able to draw in participants who are not presently involved in one of these groups or haven't attended a farm transfer workshop.

Our challenge is to work with producers to determine what the problems and concerns are that have held up the farm transfer process. Lack of communication about expectations and assumptions are typical challenges that affect the success of farm transfer planning and positive change.

9	Follow-up with project participants to see where each is at with their transfer planning process	Attend a small group meeting and or meet twice with a consultant to work on their transfer plan	June, 2010	50

Project Description

We will make farm visits to work one-on-one with dairy producers to determine what the problems and concerns are that have held up the farm transfer process.

We will send a direct mail piece to all Vermont dairy producers. The direct mail piece will talk about the value of transfer planning and transfer planning tips. It will also include a post card to return if the producer is interested in financial support for visits with a consultant of their choice to work on the specifics of their transfer plan.

We will join each of the two young farmer discussion groups to address the value and role of conflicts that can arise and prevent the transfer process from moving forward. Everyone involved will have an opportunity to voice their perception of any problems and voice their goals and needs. Successful transfer planning requires compromise and change for both generations. We will also discuss the legal and economic process but the legal plan can not happen without addressing farm succession issues.

During all individual and group discussions as well as the mailing, we will promote the financial support available for individual visits with a consultant of their choice to work on the specifics of their transfer plan. The financial support will also be promoted during transferring the farm workshops being held by UVM in 2009-2010. The University Of Vermont School Of Business has a program called Vermont Family Business Initiative. Dairy producers could use this financial support to pay for part of a one-year membership in this organization.

We will follow-up with project participants one month after the meetings with consultations to see where each producer is at in their planning process.

We believe we will be successful in getting a minimum of 50 dairy farms to participate in this project because we will draw from attendance at introductory farm transfer workshops and introduce a new marketing piece with the direct mail to Vermont dairy producers. We will also work with the two very active young farmer discussion groups in Vermont.

The key to the success of this project is working one-on-one with dairy producers who are ready to move forward with transfer planning and giving them specific guidance and follow-up in the implementation of changed practices. Most transfer planning education does not include one-on-one guidance and follow-up to keep the process moving forward. Ours does.

Tools and Curriculum:

Presenter for the young farmer discussion groups will be Annette Higby, Attorney at Law. She was chosen for her experience and expertise in working with producers on generational farm transfer, farm business formation and farm leasing.

The direct mail piece and other hand out material will include the use of existing materials such as: Business Transfer Guide by NY Farm Link. There is a Senior and Junior Generation Guide; Doing Business Together: A Joint Business Agreement Guide also by NY Land Link; Business Entity Planning a Texas Cooperative Extension bulletin; Succession Planning bulletin from Dairy Alliance out of Penn State.

The project team will also research and assemble additional resource materials related to farm transfer planning

Describe your team's capacity to deliver this project:

Vermont Agency of Agriculture, Food and Markets (VAAFM) has a long history of delivering programs and services to Vermont producers. They have earned the respect of the farmers they serve. This goodwill among farmers in the state will be a critical factor in ensuring that producers will respond to invitations to participate in this project. VDAFM has a successful track record working with RME on other risk management partnerships.

Knowledge of Vermont Agriculture. The range of activities operated by VAAFM puts them in a unique position of knowing the farm characteristics, crops, and trends in agriculture within the state.

Access to Producer Information. VAAFM already has access to extensive data on the production characteristics of farms in the state. They can draw on much of this information to design an effective risk management education project.

Louise Waterman (team leader and AAFM employee) has been working with farmers for many years. She is the project coordinator for one RME on-going farm labor management project and several past RME projects, works with producers on farm transfer planning, facilitates a dairy management team, as well as supporting the coordination of the existing Farm Viability Enhancement Program and working with a young farmer discussion group. She is also currently working with NYCAMH as a project coordinator for a safety grant. As such, she is experienced in building business relationships with farmers and other agricultural professionals, coordinating with other service providers, assigning tasks, delegating and follow-through.

Other team member capacity information included in 'requested documents'.

Re: Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers Project Number: RME-JDN02960

Vermont Farm Bureau supports the Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers Project as a way to sustain efforts to address dairy farm business transfers. There is a clear and demonstrated need for knowledge about business transfers among dairy farmers because of the complicated rules, documentation and interaction required in today's business climate.

The project will provide our producers with another tool to utilize when considering their retirement. Guidance material for the possibility of a farm transfer, as well as a plan and the implementation of positive change will have a positive impact on dairy farming in Vermont.

Vermont Farm Bureau would participate in the publicity of the training programs to our 4000 members through all of our publications. In addition we offer to sponsor one or more of the training sessions. We expect that participants would gather enough information and skill to put their own transfer plan in to effect.

Thank you for considering this project for funding.

Dear Louise:

I would be glad to collaborate with you with your program to provide one-on-on assistance on farm transfer and business transition issues with Vermont farmers.

I plan to conduct several workshops on these issues in the 2009-2010 program year and one-onone assistance would be a great 2nd step in the process for many farm families. Therefore I will work with you to see that it reaches as many farmers as possible.

Sincerely,

Dear Louise,

I am writing this letter to confirm collaboration between the University of Vermont's Dairy Management Team Program and your efforts through the Agency of Agriculture centered on educating Vermont's 1100 dairy farmers about farm transfer.

As you know, the average age of Vermont's dairy owners is over 45 years of age, and transferring the farm to the next generation is on the minds of many farmers. I have already enrolled a couple of dairies in my Dairy Management Team program who are looking for us to facilitate a sensible farm transfer, and have heard from others about the use of a management team to get this job done.

I understand that you are writing a grant proposal to seek funding for farm transfer education. I am happy to collaborate with you, dairy management teams make a perfect format for delivering the message and bringing together trusted advisors to help farmers with this important issue.

Sincerely,

RE: Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers

Dear Louise,

I am writing to express my support of your project to provide assistance for Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers.

I believe that the program you have outlined is precisely what is needed to help Vermont farm families find their way through the farm transfer process. In my work with Vermont dairy farms, I find that meeting with them on a one-on-one and small-group basis seems to be the most effective way to provide information and create support networks to enhance their ability to bring about the change they seek.

I wish you good luck with your program and offer the support of the VtSBDC in your efforts.

Sincerely,

Steve Paddock

Project Name: Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers

Project Summary:

This project addresses the financial and human risk factors associated with dairy farm business transfers. We will work with 50 Vermont dairy producers, one-on-one and in small groups, on issues related to farm transfer planning. Producers with dairy management teams and the two young dairy producer discussion group members will be key focus areas. This project will also follow up with producers who have attended introductory transferring the farm workshops and do a direct mail to the ~ 1100 VT dairy producers in VT. This project will provide VT dairy producers with guidance material for developing a farm transfer plan and implementing positive change as well as a catalyst for action - cost share for professional fees. For producers to have successful farm transfers they need a plan and help along the way. We will work with producers who are interested in moving forward with a farm transfer.
Risk Management Improvements:

Our project's targeted results fall within the financial, legal and human/personal Risk Management Areas. By establishing and or improving transfer goals and farm communications our project participants will improve their human/personal risk management. Improved communications and setting goals are keys to managing this risk area. Participants will have a better understanding of tax issues, business entities and transfer strategies for their individual farm and develop a written transfer plan outline – this will address the farms financial and legal risk management areas.

Although this project doesn't directly reduce risk such as purchasing crop insurance would, it is an indicator that participants are taking proactive steps to manage these risk areas.

A risk facing the Vermont dairy industry is the aging dairy farmer population and the number of producers who have not developed a transfer plan for their business. There are approximately 1100 dairy producers in Vermont. The dairy industry in Vermont generates 80-85% of our agricultural revenue. Successful farm transfer planning is an essential part of Vermont's dairy industry and it's important to the industries future in Vermont.

The key to the success of this project is working one-on-one with dairy producers who are ready to move forward with transfer planning and giving them specific guidance and follow-up in the implementation of changed practices. Our project will provide one-on-one guidance and follow-up to keep the process moving forward.

Dairy producers across Vermont are interested in moving forward with a transfer plan to make financial, legal and human/personal risk management easier.

Producer Demand:

There are approximately 1100 dairy producers in Vermont. Based on a study done by Bob Parsons, University of Vermont Extension, Vermont dairy operators' average 49 years of age and are most likely to have farmed for more than 20 years. We would expect the age to be higher if the survey asked the age of the owner of the farmland rather than the age of the operator. Results of the survey showed more than half of Vermont's dairy farmers have been making key management decisions for more than 20 years and over 70% are sole proprietorships with one or two family members working on the farm full-time.

At the 2009 Vermont Farm Show we surveyed producers and found that 86.8 % - mostly dairy producerswould like individual and or small group support with their individual farm transfer plan.

In a survey done by the University of Arkansas, dairy producers in the East are most interested in learning from each other and from professionals and in receiving new information from farm visits, printed fact sheets and small group meetings.

By tailoring our approach around these interests we will have success in drawing in participants.

The State of Vermont established Dairy Management Teams in 2007. There are now multiple teams up and running and transfer planning is one of the goals for many of these teams.

We will draw from these teams for project participants as well as two very active young dairy producer discussion groups. These are the producer 'groups' that will choose to participate in and will benefit most from this project.

Project participants will also include producers who have attended an introductory farm transfer planning workshop and are ready to move forward with managing farm transfer risks.

By including a direct mail to all VT dairy producers which will include a transfer planning resource list and information on the cost share for professional services, we will also be able to draw in participants who are not presently involved in one of these groups or haven't attended a farm transfer workshop.

Our challenge is to work with producers to determine what the problems and concerns are that have held up the farm transfer process. Lack of communication about expectations and assumptions are typical challenges that affect the success of farm transfer planning and positive change.

9	Follow-up with project participants to see where each is at with their transfer planning process	Attend a small group meeting and or meet twice with a consultant to work on their transfer plan	June, 2010	50

Project Description

We will make farm visits to work one-on-one with dairy producers to determine what the problems and concerns are that have held up the farm transfer process.

We will send a direct mail piece to all Vermont dairy producers. The direct mail piece will talk about the value of transfer planning and transfer planning tips. It will also include a post card to return if the producer is interested in financial support for visits with a consultant of their choice to work on the specifics of their transfer plan.

We will join each of the two young farmer discussion groups to address the value and role of conflicts that can arise and prevent the transfer process from moving forward. Everyone involved will have an opportunity to voice their perception of any problems and voice their goals and needs. Successful transfer planning requires compromise and change for both generations. We will also discuss the legal and economic process but the legal plan can not happen without addressing farm succession issues.

During all individual and group discussions as well as the mailing, we will promote the financial support available for individual visits with a consultant of their choice to work on the specifics of their transfer plan. The financial support will also be promoted during transferring the farm workshops being held by UVM in 2009-2010. The University Of Vermont School Of Business has a program called Vermont Family Business Initiative. Dairy producers could use this financial support to pay for part of a one-year membership in this organization.

We will follow-up with project participants one month after the meetings with consultations to see where each producer is at in their planning process.

We believe we will be successful in getting a minimum of 50 dairy farms to participate in this project because we will draw from attendance at introductory farm transfer workshops and introduce a new marketing piece with the direct mail to Vermont dairy producers. We will also work with the two very active young farmer discussion groups in Vermont.

The key to the success of this project is working one-on-one with dairy producers who are ready to move forward with transfer planning and giving them specific guidance and follow-up in the implementation of changed practices. Most transfer planning education does not include one-on-one guidance and follow-up to keep the process moving forward. Ours does.

Tools and Curriculum:

Presenter for the young farmer discussion groups will be Annette Higby, Attorney at Law. She was chosen for her experience and expertise in working with producers on generational farm transfer, farm business formation and farm leasing.

The direct mail piece and other hand out material will include the use of existing materials such as: Business Transfer Guide by NY Farm Link. There is a Senior and Junior Generation Guide; Doing Business Together: A Joint Business Agreement Guide also by NY Land Link; Business Entity Planning a Texas Cooperative Extension bulletin; Succession Planning bulletin from Dairy Alliance out of Penn State.

The project team will also research and assemble additional resource materials related to farm transfer planning

Describe your team's capacity to deliver this project:

Vermont Agency of Agriculture, Food and Markets (VAAFM) has a long history of delivering programs and services to Vermont producers. They have earned the respect of the farmers they serve. This goodwill among farmers in the state will be a critical factor in ensuring that producers will respond to invitations to participate in this project. VDAFM has a successful track record working with RME on other risk management partnerships.

Knowledge of Vermont Agriculture. The range of activities operated by VAAFM puts them in a unique position of knowing the farm characteristics, crops, and trends in agriculture within the state.

Access to Producer Information. VAAFM already has access to extensive data on the production characteristics of farms in the state. They can draw on much of this information to design an effective risk management education project.

Louise Waterman (team leader and AAFM employee) has been working with farmers for many years. She is the project coordinator for one RME on-going farm labor management project and several past RME projects, works with producers on farm transfer planning, facilitates a dairy management team, as well as supporting the coordination of the existing Farm Viability Enhancement Program and working with a young farmer discussion group. She is also currently working with NYCAMH as a project coordinator for a safety grant. As such, she is experienced in building business relationships with farmers and other agricultural professionals, coordinating with other service providers, assigning tasks, delegating and follow-through.

Dear Mr. Tilmon,

I am a private attorney in Randolph, Vermont. My practice is focused on generational farm transfer, farm business formation and farm leasing. I am writing this letter to express my commitment to collaborating with Louise Waterman and the Vermont Agency of Food and Markets in their Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers project. For most of my clients, cost share assistance for legal and accounting fees is an essential element to the implementation of their farm transfer plans and lurge you to support this effort. Re: Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers Project Number: RME-JDN02960

Vermont Farm Bureau supports the Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers Project as a way to sustain efforts to address dairy farm business transfers. There is a clear and demonstrated need for knowledge about business transfers among dairy farmers because of the complicated rules, documentation and interaction required in today's business climate.

The project will provide our producers with another tool to utilize when considering their retirement. Guidance material for the possibility of a farm transfer, as well as a plan and the implementation of positive change will have a positive impact on dairy farming in Vermont.

Vermont Farm Bureau would participate in the publicity of the training programs to our 4000 members through all of our publications. In addition we offer to sponsor one or more of the training sessions. We expect that participants would gather enough information and skill to put their own transfer plan in to effect.

Thank you for considering this project for funding.

Dear Louise:

I would be glad to collaborate with you with your program to provide one-on-on assistance on farm transfer and business transition issues with Vermont farmers.

I plan to conduct several workshops on these issues in the 2009-2010 program year and one-onone assistance would be a great  $2^{nd}$  step in the process for many farm families. Therefore I will work with you to see that it reaches as many farmers as possible.

Dear Louise,

I am writing this letter to confirm collaboration between the University of Vermont's Dairy Management Team Program and your efforts through the Agency of Agriculture centered on educating Vermont's 1100 dairy farmers about farm transfer.

As you know, the average age of Vermont's dairy owners is over 45 years of age, and transferring the farm to the next generation is on the minds of many farmers. I have already enrolled a couple of dairies in my Dairy Management Team program who are looking for us to facilitate a sensible farm transfer, and have heard from others about the use of a management team to get this job done.

I understand that you are writing a grant proposal to seek funding for farm transfer education. I am happy to collaborate with you, dairy management teams make a perfect format for delivering the message and bringing together trusted advisors to help farmers with this important issue.

Sincerely,

RE: Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers

Dear Louise,

I am writing to express my support of your project to provide assistance for Farm Business Transfer Planning for Vermont Dairy Producers.

I believe that the program you have outlined is precisely what is needed to help Vermont farm families find their way through the farm transfer process. In my work with Vermont dairy farms, I find that meeting with them on a one-on-one and small-group basis seems to be the most effective way to provide information and create support networks to enhance their ability to bring about the change they seek.

I wish you good luck with your program and offer the support of the VtSBDC in your efforts.

Sincerely. Steve Paddock
